The Boston Women's Heritage Trail (BWHT) seeks to restore women to their rightful place in the history of Boston and in the school curriculum by uncovering, chronicling and disseminating information about the women who have made lasting contributions to our city. The five walks in our guidebook introduce over 180 Boston women in a wide variety of settings, occupations, and backgrounds. The walks are: the Back Bay Walk, the Beacon Hill Walk, the Downtown Walk, the North End Walk, and the South Cove/Chinatown Walk.

BWHT has also sponsored the development of 5 mini trails in Boston neighborhoods: Charlestown, Grove Hall/Roxbury, Lower Roxbury, the South End, and West Roxbury. Teachers and students blazed these trails at Boston Public Schools. In addition, BWHT collaborated with the Museum of Fine Arts to develop a trail Women Artists in the Back Bay.

BWHT sponsors teacher workshops and showcases and supports a values-based literature program, Perseverance, for Boston Public Schools eighth graders. We give guided walks and presentations, and are actively involved in a wide range of projects that promote women's history.

In connection with the dedication of the Boston Women's Memorial, BWHT has developed this curriculum and has also published a trail based on the lives of the three women honored in the statue, showing where they lived and worked and other sites which honor them.

Please visit our web site – bwht.org – for up-to-date information or contact us at the information above.

We would love to help you with a women's history project!
Writing for Change: The Power of Women’s Words is divided into two sections. The first, this booklet, provides you with the goals, objectives and key questions, an overview of the primary source and activity sheets, and resource lists for further information.

Within each section is material about Abigail Adams, Phillis Wheatley, Lucy Stone and The Boston Women’s Memorial. The primary source sheets present students with the writer’s words on one side and questions on the back. There is also a full page image to accompany each section.

The primary sources and activity sheets are designed to be used individually or as a unit. Included in the section focusing on the Memorial is a guide for visiting the Memorial.
WRITING FOR CHANGE: The Power of Women’s Words

GOALS AND OBJECTIVES:

✦ To recognize the importance of Abigail Adams’s, Phillis Wheatley’s, and Lucy Stone’s contributions to history
✦ To understand and appreciate how these women are real and relevant today
✦ To analyze the writings of Adams, Wheatley, and Stone with regard to their goals
✦ To learn ways that change can be facilitated through language written and spoken
✦ To consider the influence of public art in our interpretation of history
✦ To help instill in young people a commitment to, as Lucy Stone implored, “make the world better” through change

KEY QUESTIONS:

✦ How have the contributions of Abigail Adams, Phillis Wheatley, and Lucy Stone helped improve society today?
✦ How are Abigail Adams’s, Phillis Wheatley’s, and Lucy Stone’s goals relevant today?
✦ Abigail Adams’s, Phillis Wheatley’s, and Lucy Stone’s work changed social norms and government policy. What issues were important to Adams, Wheatley, and Stone? What did they change? What has not changed?
✦ How did (does) writing function as a tool for effecting change?
✦ How does change happen?
✦ How does public art function as a tool for learning about history?
✦ What makes certain individuals better suited to effecting change?
✦ Can one person make the world better? How?

Note: Spelling and grammar are reprinted with period accuracy. Some discrepancies from today’s style do exist.

Activities:

1. Have students read Source #1~ Abigail Adams’s Letter for Rights
   Discussion Points:
   - Letters as a method for encouraging change
   - The reasonableness of Abigail Adams’s request
   - John Adams was not only Abigail’s husband; he was also a founder of American government and a president. Who is Abigail writing to? Her husband? A leader of a new nation? A combination of both?
   - The founding documents of America did not include women. Adams says in her letter “If particular care and attention is not paid to the ladies we are determined to foment a Rebellion”. Has this happened?
   - The tone of the letter

2. Have students read Source #2~ John Adams’s Reaction to Women’s Rights.
   Discussion Points:
   - Women’s legal rights as “laughable”
   - Women compared to other disenfranchised groups
   - Power dynamics between groups; dominance and subservience
   - John Adams’s support of women’s rights
   - John Adams’s tone in this letter

3. Have students read Source #3~ Abigail Adams’s Beliefs About Women and Education.
   Discussion Points:
   - Differences between education for girls and boys—18th c. and 21st c.
   - Women’s connection to children’s early education (particularly in 18th c.)
   - Contradiction of woman/mother as early childhood educator (republican motherhood) while she is under-educated
   - Connection between women’s education and women’s rights
   - Abigail Adams as a woman ahead of her time

4. After reading and discussing Adams’s letter excerpts, ask students to complete Activity Sheet #1~ Creating a Persuasive Letter for Women’s Rights in preparation for writing their own persuasive letter. After completing Activity Sheet 1, break students into small groups to discuss their lists of areas of inequality. Discussion Points:
   - What categories do the inequalities fall under (e.g.- work, home, social)?
   - Which inequalities are most prevalent?
   - In what areas of inequality do students believe they can effect change?
5. Thinking about Adams’s feelings about girls’ education, ask students to complete Activity Sheet #2~ The Importance of School for All Children. This is an opportunity for students to write about why school is important for them and people in general. After students have filled in their sheet, have a group discussion about their ideas.

Discussion Points:
- Why is school important?
- How would life be different if all children couldn't go to school?

Optional Activity Extenders:
Building on the Persuasive Letter for Women’s Rights Activity, have students write a persuasive letter to an individual with whom they have a personal relationship. Perhaps it is a family member, group leader, teacher, or coach. Subjects could include: household rules, homework, practice activities, etc.

Discussion Points:
- How is it different to write a letter to someone you know personally as opposed to a stranger?
- Did you think about how this person would react while you were writing your letter? Did this change what you wrote?

Letters to Abigail
Abigail Adams was concerned with many issues that affected women. Have students write letters to Abigail updating her on the progress that has been made on the issues that were important to her. In addition to the update, students can also make suggestions about what change still needs to happen.
PHILLIS WHEATLEY (1753?-1784)

Born in West Africa and sold as a slave from the ship Phillis in colonial Boston. She was a literary prodigy whose 1773 volume Poems on Various Subjects, Religious and Moral was the first book published by an African writer in America.
PHILLIS WHEATLEY (1753?-1784)

Concepts:
The right to be free
Symbolism in poetry
Poetry as a vehicle for change
Imagery in poetry
The power of individual words to convey meaning

Activities:

1. Have students read Source #4~ Excerpt from “To the Right Honourable William, Earl of Dartmouth, His Majesty’s Principal Secretary of State for North America, &c.”.
   Discussion Points:
   - How Wheatley’s concern is expressed in this poem
   - Word choice as a vehicle for emotion and change
   - Biographical information present in the poem
   - Wheatley’s feeling at the close of the excerpt: And can I then but pray
   - Tone and emotion of the poem

2. Have students read Source #5~ Excerpt from “To S.M., A Young African Painter, On Seeing His Works”.
   Discussion Points:
   - Elements of the poem
   - Wheatley’s view of herself in reference to Moorhead, particularly in terms of age/experience
   - Poetry as a tool for experiencing art and the artistic process
   - Imagery in poetry
   - Art and writing as means to “freedom”

3. Have students complete Activity Sheet #3~ Writing Poetry
   Discussion Points:
   - Motivations for writing poetry
   - Steps for writing a poem
   - Poetic devices

4. Have students read Source #6~ “Something Like A Sonnet for Phillis Miracle Wheatley” by June Jordan
   Discussion Points:
   - Jordan’s choice to call Phillis Wheatley “miracle”
   - Differentiation between Wheatley as slave and poet
   - Analysis of second stanza metaphor
   - Wheatley’s feelings towards being literate
   - The tone of the two stanzas and the impact that word choice has on them
   - Poetry as a vehicle for change
   - Choice between being educated and a slave or being illiterate and free
5. Have students complete Activity Sheet #4~ Picturing Words

Discussion Points:
- How do words create images in your mind?
- Are there particular words that seem to make images come alive?
- Non-representational art and symbolism
- How images can broaden the meaning of a poem

Optional Activity Extenders:
Have students read the biography of Phillis Wheatley and have each choose one of her poems to read (see resource section). Each student should choose a different poem—or break into groups of two with each group focusing on one poem. After reading the poem, have the students make a list of connections they see between Wheatley’s life and the subject/message of the poem. Come together as a group and create a master list of the thematic connections between her life and her work.

Have students create a third stanza to June Jordan’s poem.

Building on the discussions about Wheatley’s poetry and how poetry can tell a story about someone’s life, have students choose a woman from history and capture her life through poetry. Students should consider how the subject connects to word choice and structure.
Lucy Stone (1818-1893)
Blank Page
Lucy Stone (1818-1893)

Concepts:
- Equality under the law
- Women's rights
- The right to speak in public
- Theory and practice of American Democracy with regard to women’s rights
- Voting as a vehicle for change
- Consideration of multiple sides of an issue
- The power of the written word

Activities:

1. Have students read Source #7~ Lucy Stone’s Desire for Rights.
   Discussion Points:
   - Lucy Stone’s request in her letter
   - Taxation without representation
   - Letters as a means for change
   - How this situation differs from the request of the American colonists (men) in the 18th century
   - How long it took for women to gain the right to vote (1920)
   - Compare Stone’s concerns in 1858 to the present

2. Have students read Source #8~ Lucy Stone’s Speech at the National Women’s Rights Convention, Cincinnati 1855.
   Discussion Points:
   - Status of women’s education in the mid 19th century
   - Women's legal status in marriage in the mid 19th century
   - Lucy Stone’s commitment to make women recognize disappointment as a means to bring about change
   - Comparison to women’s status in the 18th century—the time of Abigail Adams and Phillis Wheatley
   - Women’s current status in education and marriage

3. Have students complete Activity Sheet #5~ Debating the Importance of Words.
   Discussion Points:
   - How a debate works
   - Speaking in public
   - Backing up arguments and refuting others’ positions
   - Freedom of speech

4. Have students complete Activity Sheet #6~ Why Vote?
   Discussion Points:
   - Importance of voting
Women’s suffrage
Language as a method of change
Speech
Article
Is one format better suited for making change than the other? Why or why not?
Importance of using facts and opinions to send a message

5. Have Students view Source #9- Cartoon “The Anti and the Snowball—Then and Now”.

Discussion Points:
- Main idea of the image
- What has made the women’s rights cause more powerful?
- How can this message apply to today’s social causes?

Optional Activity Extenders:
Role-play for “Why Vote?” Activity~ Building on the Why Vote? activity, have students read their speeches/articles to the class. Have students with similar ideas work together to hone their arguments. Students with differing views should prepare questions to ask the speakers. This can be an opportunity for students to work on public speaking skills.

The press plays an important role in making people aware of different issues and their importance. In the 1800’s the press was a male dominated industry. An exception to the male dominated press was Lucy Stone’s Woman’s Journal. This publication, located on Park Street in Boston, MA, was founded in 1870 and led by Lucy Stone. Later her daughter, Alice Stone Blackwell, took over leading the publication until its merger with another women’s publication in 1917. The Woman’s Journal was dedicated to advancing the causes and interests of women, including educational, industrial, legal and political equality—particularly women’s suffrage.

- Have students research women-run publications. How many publications exist today that were founded by women and are led by women (at all levels)? What challenges do women-run publications face that those run by men may not?

- The Woman’s Journal added a new perspective to the publishing world. Have students create a class newspaper/newsletter. Have students research newspapers from the 1800’s to get ideas about layout and style. This newspaper/newsletter does not have to be fancy. Lucy Stone’s message was by far the most important part of her paper.
1. Have students read Source #10~ Text from the Boston Women’s Memorial.
   Discussion Points:
   ✦ What can you learn about the women from the words they wrote?
   ✦ Excerpt choices as reflective of women’s lives
   ✦ Main theme of the choices for each woman; for the three as a whole

2. Have students read Source #11~ The Creative Process of the Boston Women’s Memorial.
   Discussion Points:
   ✦ Symbols in the world and their impact
   ✦ Modifying traditional symbols and styles for new subjects
   ✦ Does removing women from their pedestals make a strong statement?

3. Activity plan for visit to the Boston Women’s Memorial

Optional Activity Extender:

A “Roundtable Discussion” with Abigail Adams, Phillis Wheatley, and Lucy Stone~ After students have viewed the Memorial and read the short biographies of the women, have them use the included primary sources to learn more about the goals and philosophies of the women. This activity asks students to use primary and secondary sources, take on the persona of a historic character, and use reading, writing, speaking, listening, and group skills. In addition to further learning about the three women, students will gain a stronger understanding of the differences between primary and secondary sources and the purposes they serve. Students begin by reading the biographies of the three women (and potentially conducting further library or internet research) and completing Activity Sheet #7~ Biographical Data Sheet. After completing this sheet, students will analyze a primary source or sources from the woman and fill in Activity Sheet #8~Primary Source Analysis Sheet This sheet has two parts, part one involves careful reading of the primary source, and part two asks the students to take on the persona of the woman and answers question from other students. During part two, students can use Activity Sheet #9~ Listening Sheet to take notes.
